

Clinical Research for a cure tomorrow

01.07.2025

Press Release

From SAKK to Swiss Cancer Institute: A new name for a strong future.

The Swiss Cancer Institute – formerly known as SAKK – proudly unveils its new name and bold visual identity. This transformation marks a new chapter for the national organization for clinical cancer research in Switzerland, underlining our dynamic evolution and compelling vision for the future.

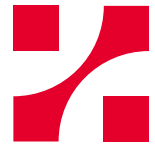

As a research institution of national importance, officially recognized by the State Secretariat for Education, Research and Innovation (SERI), we remain fully committed to independent, practice-oriented clinical cancer research. Grounded in curiosity, responsibility, and appreciation, the Swiss Cancer Institute is deeply rooted in Switzerland – and globally connected.

Shaping the Future of Cancer Research – Together

We uphold the highest standards in clinical research and foster close, trusted collaboration within a strong network of leading Swiss hospitals. Our consistent commitment to sustainable funding is essential to securing long-term progress in oncology – so that patients gain faster access to the best possible therapies, today and tomorrow.

Modern, Bold, and Forward-Thinking

Our new brand identity reflects who we are and what we stand for – a modern, innovative research institute with a clear purpose. It strengthens our presence within the scientific community and enhances our visibility to the public.

About the Swiss Cancer Institute

As the only research institution of national importance, we work with all leading hospitals to conduct non-profit, multicenter cancer research for all types of cancer in all specialist areas. Our national network reaches almost all cancer patients in Switzerland and coordinates nearly all international academic cancer trials. The Swiss Cancer Institute's research improves the clinical care of cancer patients in the long term. Trials are conducted in collaboration with industry to give patients rapid access to optimal therapies.
